Essay Title: Passion: The Foundation of Life

Essay:

"It doesn't matter if you like a job better than the other, you'll get nowhere in life unless you have money".

I've heard this statement from my family whenever I talk to them about my potential future career. I have been conditioned to think that more money, equals better life since I was a little girl, but I knew I was destined to pursue a career for which I have passion and drive.

From that moment on, I realized I must stick up for myself and go with what I have a strong passion for. Passion is the most important aspect of life because, without passion, you would go through life without an end goal, a reason to keep going every day. I have watched my single mom go through the most painful situations, but even with three kids she had to care for, she pursued her passion of becoming a psychiatrist. Watching my mom not give up on her passions in her late 40s, has made me firmly pursue my dreams and work hard for the future that my mom has wished upon me, and the future I will be stable and successful in.

Passion is a very valuable and important core value for everybody because passion is the thing that starts all your interests and the thing that determines how diligent you are in your future. Passion can lead to roads of success and can open doors of success for your future. A passion doesn't have to be a job or career; it can be the people you care about or something that makes you feel at ease after experiencing a hard day. When a person has passion present in their mind, they will always discipline themselves and push through each day, because they can feel the accomplishments, they have achieved from doing what they love.

I will never give up my passion for something that would make me unhappy. I have always promised myself I will achieve a future that would make me a person who is happy and content. To keep this promise, I have encouraged myself to work the hardest I can while fighting the different battles that will come my way. Even if I secure the future I want, I will still find a passion for something new and I will pursue my passions until I am satisfied. I hope everybody can find a passion in their life, a reason to wake up and work toward the foundation of their happiness, even through difficult situations.
